

Jim

Age: 18

Occupation: Student

Location: Glasgow

Influences

After Breezing through his high school, Jim had similar plans for the university- making the most out of it. His father was a captain of a merchant navy ship, and would stay away for most part of the year, while his mother was a home maker. Being an outgoing person, he was always surrounded by people; he loved attention.

A day in the life...

Since the teaching shifted to the online mode, he's found out new ways of pulling pranks with his gang of four. His first half of the day goes in planning new pranks to pull off on teachers and classmates- be it the popular zoom bombings, catfishing, ransomware attacks, you name it. While on a usual evening he would be out with his little band, playing guitar in an abandoned basement of a bar. Since his mother was the only one at home with him, he was very attached to her, and just out of respect he would catch up on lectures by staying up late at night, so he wouldn't let her down.

Goals

Pursuing Social Media and Digital Marketing, Jim was ambitious and wanted to work for Facebook in the near future, meanwhile also keeping his hopes high for launching a music video with his band on YouTube. Competition was one thing that he couldn't bear, and he always worked towards eliminating it, even if it was through immoral ways.

Interests and Hobbies

Aside from playing guitar with his band, Jim developed a thing for antique cars when he visited the infamous Automobile Museum in Monaco as a kid, his favourite being the Facel Vega. Last but not the least pulling pranks was his go-to hobby. He relished looking at the reaction of someone who just got pranked.

Challenges

He finds himself torn between his dream to become a guitarist or to keep his mother's pride by getting a degree in the Digital Marketing course, the latter one being difficult since he was an average student.

