

Adam

---

Age: 21

Occupation: None

Location: Strathclyde

A day in the life...

Adam created a very specific routine which started with a cup of black coffee at 9 in the morning, followed by a shower. Next he was headed straight to the community Library, where he would spend exactly 4 hours on his laptop enhancing his cyber security skills by looking up concepts like Ethical Hacking and Networking. Next he would run through his social media tweeting out his views on the new political strategies and calling them out on Instagram side by side. Reddit became another means for him as he created a troll page, bad mouthing the political leaders. Putting his views out in the open so the public could see them and start a controversy among themselves, acted as serotonin for him. He'd go to bed knowing the controversy would stir up and become outrageous to a point which would lead the social activists to create chaos.

Interests and Hobbies

Due to his current lifestyle, he didn't have much leisure time on his hands. But he would enjoy the occasional smoke to clear his head, something he picked up from his university days. He turns on the radio to tune into instrumental piano music before going to bed. As far as his social life is concerned, he sticks to his online friends who share the same views as him.

Influences

Born in a middle class family, Adam was always away from the privileges. Although being a child prodigy opened a door of opportunities for him, as he made his way into the reputed University of Strathclyde, following his interests in Cyber Security with Political Science on the side. With persistent thoughts of quitting university because it was “a waste of time” he decided to drop out in the second year, and started pursuing his own interests. The disheartened parents had no choice but to believe in him and support him.

Goals

Adam was fixated on the idea of exposing political leaders via the platform of social media. He was driven by this rage inside of him as a result of him being a prodigal child and being treated differently, separate from the others. His passion for politics resulted in political leaders becoming his target as he believed that most of them just got the position because of family inheritance, without actually working for it. He felt that the leaders were unworthy of their stature.

Challenges

There's only so far the parents of a child with no clear intentions would go to support him, and so they started cutting Adam off of the internet connection, pocket money and eventually the one thing that mattered the most to him- his laptop. But being his conniving self, Adam segregated his time into moving lawns and going to a cyber café, and using the computers available there by the money he acquired from moving lawns in the neighbourhood.